The Honorable George H. Mahon
U. S. House of Representatives
Washington, D. C.

Dear Mr. Mahon:

This concerns our recent discussion regarding the relationship of the Central Intelligence Agency with the CIA Subcommittees of the Committees on Appropriations and Armed Services.

You will find that this subject is covered at some length in the debate on the so-called Mansfield Bill (S. Com. Res. 2) which took place on April 9 and 11, 1956, and is covered on pages 5290 - 5307, 5411 - 5426, 5428, and 5430 - 5431 of the Congressional Record. During this debate it was stressed, particularly by Senators Russell and Saltonstall, that there were formally constituted Subcommittees on Appropriations and Armed Services in both Houses that concern themselves with the CIA. The question was raised as to how often these Subcommittees met and it was stated that Armed Services generally met with the CIA two or three times a year and that the Appropriations Subcommittee met at least once a year. The proponents of the bill argued that this was insufficient to provide a thorough examination of CIA's activities, while the opponents of the proposal stated that they believed that Congress had ample authority to examine the Agency and that if there was any failure, it did not rest with the CIA.

Senator Hayden not only spoke against the bill, but also presented a rather lengthy exhibit summarizing his views, which is printed on pages 5422 and 5423 of the Congressional Record.

Enclosed are the pertinent extracts from the Congressional Record. Please do not hesitate to call on me if I may be of any further assistance in this regard.

Sincerely,

s/

UNITED STATES SENATE
Committee on Foreign Relations

29 January 1958

Honorable Allen W. Dulles
Director of Central Intelligence
Operations Coordinating Board
Executive Office Building
Washington, D. C.

Dear Mr. Dulles:

The Committee on Foreign Relations of the Senate is planning a series of hearings to obtain information regarding the current foreign policies of the United States to enable the Committee to formulate such recommendations as may be appropriate to enable the United States to maintain, strengthen, or alter its foreign policies to the end that they may most effectively serve the national interest.

Although these hearings will be primarily devoted to problems of foreign policy, the Committee believes it should have the benefit of your views with respect to the relative military, political and economic strength of the United States and the Soviet Union. Some estimate of this relative strength is necessary if the Committee is to be in a position to undertake a realistic appraisal of our foreign policies.

On behalf of the Committee, therefore, I invite you to appear before it in Executive Session at 10 a.m., Friday, February 7, in the Foreign Relations Committee Room. It would be helpful if you come prepared to make an opening statement to the Committee, preferably not more than one-half hour in length, which might cover the following subjects: (a) evidence of present Soviet bloc military, political and economic strength; (b) evidence of present Soviet bloc military, political, and economic weakness; (c) a projection of elements of Soviet bloc strength and weakness over the next decade. You should not feel that your remarks need to be limited to these suggested subjects, although these are matters of principal concern to the Committee.
